THE EARTH OPENS ITS JAWS IN KANSAS

LOW RUMBLING SOUNDS COME FROM A JAGGED HOLE

Belief That the Huge Crater Which Is Growing Wider Is An Extinct Volcano—The Natural Phenomenon Is Attracting the Curious From All Over the State—Green Water Spurts From Its Inky Depths and Fumes of Sulphur Are Emitted.

The "Bottomless Pit," which suddenly yawned Tuesday morning in the dry, sandy bed of Smoky Hill river four miles southeast of Sharon Springs, Kansas, is gradually sucking in the earth for 500 feet around.

A jagged fissure is encircling the gigantic hole, which is 150 feet long and 100 feet wide, and nobody knows exactly how deep.

Since the hole opened with a low rumble, water has risen 40 or 50 feet out of the darkness 150 feet below. It is pale green. On its surface floats the carcass of a cow, which went down when the earth opened. Whiffs of sulphur, like the odor of gunpowder, float up at intervals while patches of bubbles, which many believe are caused by gas, appear on the surface of the slowly rising water.

Old citizens of Sharon Springs believe the disturbance is the last sputter of an almost extinct volcano. The topography of the vicinity tends to substantiate their theory.

One approaches the overflat land from the east, entering the dry sand of the river bed, in the middle of which, until Tuesday, there was a sheet of shallow water, known as the Smoky Hill basin. Old residents remember when Smoky Hill was a "bottomless" pool, 25 or 30 years ago. It was filled up with shale and clay from a mysterious source.

Rising about Smoky Hill basis was a higher bench of plain, broken, sharply at the edge and sloping gently for 25 feet to the basin, this was solid grazing land.

It was the heart of this arroya which collapsed Tuesday morning. Hundreds of tons of limestone, clay and shale suddenly tumbled downward.

Miss Sylvia Forshey, daughter of E. S. Forshey, ranchman, a mile northward, heard a low rumble and saw a bluish cloud of dust or smoke. She thought it was a prairie fire. A party investigated and found the hole, then only 50 feet wide, and descending conically into darkness.

The shallow water in Smoky Hill basin poured into the hole. Two springs on the wall of the hole spouted down into the darkness. The water rose to visibility Thursday morning and the hole yawned wider.

Ground upon which visitors stood Thursday is gone today.

Hundreds of residents of Wallace county and neighboring counties are motoring to the scene. Little groups venture beyond the great fissures, certain of which are five feet wide and visibly expanding.

S. J. Chisum, sheriff of Wallace county, prepared to rope off the site, fearing sightseers may go down with the crumbling earth.

Edgar Heyl, employe of the electric plant, a rope around his waist, ventured out on the tottering slabs of earth split from the mainland. Other youths, also held by ropes, sat on the edge of the vortex and pushed the crackling slabs into the hole with their feet.

It is interesting to note that the sand in the bed of the river slopes, reappearing several miles below. It appears that a subterranean river lies beneath. Yet engineers say the hole would crack along its course, if such were the case, rather than the form of a conical hole.

But where have the hundreds of tons of rock and soil gone? Whence come the sulphur fumes and the gas? It is a matter of conjecture. Many wonder whether the phenomenon is an explanation of the river's name, Smoky Hill. A strange blue haze hangs over the narrow bed thru the summer. Perhaps the Indian tribes who named it, saw Smoky Hill basin smoke centuries ago with volcanic action. There is said to be a deposit of pumice stone 20 miles southeastward.

MYSTERIOUS MURDER.
Cleveland, O., March 12, (UP). — Four men were assigned by Prosecutor E. C. Stanton today to investigate the mysterious murder of Samuel Volpe, of Canton, Ohio, whose body was found recently in the snow on a knoll in Pepper Pike village. The assignments were made after Sheriff Fred Kohler said he had "no money and no men" to carry on the inquiry. Local police had turned the case over to Kohler.

Columbus — Reports from Troy that a representative of the attorney general's office has joined in the investigation of the Frances Drake Nesbitt mystery, were declared unfounded by Attorney General Crabbe Thursday afternoon.

Reports from Troy said Bert B. Buckley, a Dayton attorney, is taking part in the investigation at the request of Crabbe.

"If Buckley has joined the inquiry he has done so on his own initiative and not by order of my department," Crabbe said.

Cleveland — First report of the federal grand jury on the huge alcohol fraud centering about the Superior Industrial Alcohol company of Cleveland has been postponed from today to Saturday, it was learned at the federal building here.

This is due to the absence of District Attorney A. E. Bernstein and his first assistant, Miles E. Evans, who are to return here from Cincinnati. Bernstein and Evans with special intelligence bureau agent, George Golding say they will ask about 125 indictments in the alcohol case.

JOSIAH KIRBY INDICTED FOR JURY FIXING

Charged With Offering Member Fee of $1000 for Vote for Acquittal.

Cleveland — An indictment charging Josiah Kirby, former head of the defunct Cleveland Discount company with jury fixing, was returned by the federal grand jury Thursday afternoon. Kirby is already in the county jail awaiting sentence in his conviction for using the mails to defraud.

The indictment charges that Kirby on December 28, in Akron, procured Attorney William R. Irvin of that city to approach Latham H. Conger, a prospective juror for Kirby's federal court trials, in an effort to induce Conger to get on the jury and vote for Kirby's acquittal.

Kirby was charged thru Irvin, to have offered Conger payment of losses and expenses incurred by jury duty and a fee of $1000 if he voted for acquittal. The indictment was in two counts—one charging an attempt to obstruct justice and the other an attempt to influence a prospective juror.

Details surrounding the alleged transaction were given by Irvin in an interview.

INCOMPETENT TEACHERS.

Columbus, O., March 12, (UP). There are thousands of incompetent teachers in Ohio, State Director of Education Vernon M. Riegel declared in a letter today to county superintendents.

"This incompetency," Riegel said, "is becoming alarming and in time may become 'educational degeneracy.' Incompetent teachers make incompetent pupils and the latter, in turn, make incompetent teachers," he said.

"Education rather than legislation is the cure for many difficulties of the profession," he declared.

INSANE MAN STAGED FIGHT WITH HIS GUN

Barricaded Himself in House But Was Finally Captured by Policemen.

Toledo, Ohio, March 12, (UP). After barricading himself in a house here, Steve Lashley, 71, said to have gone violently insane, staged a two hour gun battle with police early today before he was shot and captured.

Lashley began his rampage shortly after midnight, according to police, first threatening roomers in the house and later pursuing a woman and her two small children.

The woman and the children managed to lock themselves in a room. Lashley, apparently determined to kill them, fired thru the door.

Police were summoned but when they attempted to gain entrance to the house, found Lashley in command. He fired upon them as they advanced.

Repulsed by the man's fire, police withdrew to a distance, held a conference, then surrounded the house. They advanced steadily, but two hours elapsed before one of them shot Lashley enabling them to capture him.

As a delegate to the Women's Missionary conference held in Columbus, February 11, Mrs. H. H. Groce gave an interesting and thoro report. On account of sickness, the musical numbers planned for this meeting were postponed. During the social hour lunch was served by the March committee.

St. Patrick's Day to Be Observed Widely Throughout the U. S.

St. Patrick's Day parties will be more popular this year than they ever were before, according to indications. Not only are the descendants of St. Patrick's adopted country celebrating on March 17, but the day is fast becoming one of almost countrywide observation.

Of course, the color scheme for a St. Patrick's celebration ought to be carried out in green or in green and white, including the prizes. A variety case with a bit of green enamel, a green leather address book, or handkerchiefs with green borders of embroidery, are acceptable presents.

Even the refreshments can be made very suggestive of the day, as is shown by the following recipes and menus:

Cream of Pea Soup
Buttered Green Beans
Pigs in Blankets
Irish Salad
Patrick Sandwiches
Pistachio Ice Cream
White Cake
Coffee or Tea

Cream of Pea Soup
1 No. 2 can peas
Cold water
1 slice onion
1 1/2 tsp. sugar
1 tsp. salt
Pepper
1 cup evaporated milk
1 cup water or stock
1 tsp. flour
1 tsp. butter

Make a white sauce of the diluted evaporated milk, flour, butter, salt and pepper. Drain the liquid from the peas. Add sufficient water to the liquid to make one pint and return to the peas. Add the onion and sugar and boil for five minutes then rub through a sieve. There should be two and one-half cups of pulp and liquid. Combine pulp and white sauce. Serve immediately. Serves six.

Pigs in Blankets
12 large oysters
Dash essence
12 slices bacon
1/2 tsp. salt
12 half-slices hot toast
1 tsp. butter
1 cup evaporated milk
1 1/2 tsp. sugar
1 tsp. salt
1 cup chicken stock
Pepper

Sprinkle oysters with salt and pepper and wrap each in a slice of bacon, fastening with a toothpick. Broil or fry until bacon is crisp. Serve on toast and pour over a white sauce made of the butter, flour, salt, pepper, and diluted milk.

Shamrock Salad
2 green peppers
1 cup cottage cheese
2 tbsp. evaporated milk
1/2 tsp. cayenne pepper
1/2 tsp. chopped nuts
Salt
1 tsp. cream

Cut off stem end of pepper, remove seeds and soak in cold water for at least ten minutes. Combine cheese, milk, cream and nuts and season with salt and pepper. Pack peppers tightly with cheese mixture. Stand in refrigerator until ready to serve. Slice across thinly, and lay three or four slices (according to size of pepper) on a bed of water cress in such a fashion as to resemble a shamrock. Make a stem out of a slice of green pepper.

LOANS UP TO $500.00.

Any commodity you buy is worth a certain fixed sum of cash—no more and no less. Yet there is a tendency among retailers to have two prices—one the cash price and another the time price. Some concerns mark up the time price and then allow a certain discount for cash—others mark everything on a cash basis and add on a lump sum carrying charge for time.

Now the difference between the time and cash price is interest—nothing else; and the rate you pay and the risk you run depends entirely on the integrity of the concern you deal with.

By borrowing the money from the City Loan and dealing for cash you eliminate all risk and get full benefit of cash prices.

NEW NEWSPAPER

In Washington, D. C., Gets Warm Welcome.

Washington, March 4.—The United States Daily, David Lawrence's newspaper, made its first appearance in Washington this morning. Its purpose is: "All the facts—no opinion."

The first issue contained sixteen pages. It presents the official news of Washington—executive, legislative and judicial; all the "hand-outs" from all the departments and a summary of the whole daily activities of the government, displayed under regular news heads and with all the typographical display of the ordinary newspaper.

It contains no editorial page and no signed stories, and it met with a particularly gratifying reception in the capital.

The presses ran off 30,000 copies. The conductors of the new daily report every news stand was sold out.

The officials of the government particularly were pleased. They all have a tremendous output of government information and it has been one of their sorrows that nowhere was it all printed. Politics was strictly eschewed.

Inside were the proceedings of Tuesday's session of House and Senate condensed from the Congressional Record, as well as a tabulation of measures pending in both houses and their present status, as well as a summary of their proceedings up to date.

It will be useful as a reference publication. The initial number contains no advertisements, but a notice is printed that the columns will be open for advertisements April 5.

The founders of the paper include Owen D. Young, Mrs. McDill McCormick, Otto H. Kahn, Edward W. Bok, Robert Lansing, Albert Lasker, John W. Weeks, Simon Guggenheim, Bernard M. Baruch, James W. Gerard, E. T. Meredith, Julius Rosenwald, C. Bascom Slemp, Mary Roberts Rinehart, Anne Morgan, E. M. House, Clarence H. Mackay and John W. Davis.

STEAMER AMERICA

Badly Damaged By Fire At Newport News, Va.

Washington, March 10.—(U.P.)—Fire broke out aboard the U. S. Lines steamer America at Newport News, Va., today and spread so rapidly that it appeared the craft would be a total loss, according to Emergency Fleet corporation advises this afternoon.

A fire boat put out from Norfolk across the roads from Newport News, to aid in fighting the fire and was joined also by a shipping board tug.

Details as to men aboard or cause of fire were lacking.

The America was being repaired at Newport News.

The America is a one class cabin vessel and one of the larger ships of the U. S. lines fleet. Before the war she was owned by the Hamburg-American line and was known as the Amerika. She has been running from New York to Plymouth, Cherbourg and Bremen.

The America is a twin screw

model of 17,500 horsepower. She is 687 feet long with a displacement of 34,575 tons and is of 21,145 registered tons. Her value is placed between $3,000,000 and $4,000,000.

WOMEN'S CLUBS BACK THE 18TH AMENDMENT

Cincinnati, March 10.—Unqualified support to the eighteenth amendment as we now have it is the policy of the general as well as the Ohio State Federation of Women's Clubs, said Mrs. Charles R. Fox, president of the state federation, in an address before members of the Norwood Federation of Women's Clubs today.

"Whenever, in my capacity as president, I speak to club women, I also place before them the necessity of law observance and the upholding of the eighteenth amendment," Mrs. Fox added.

NATIONAL GAME

(By Henry L. Farrell, United Press Staff Correspondent.)

Tarpon Springs, Fla., March 11.—Listen to the chatter around the training camp of the St. Louis Browns and you will get the idea that the only doubtful entry in the 1926 world's series is the National League team.

George Sisler, the popular young manager of the club, makes no bones about his feeling.

"We'll win the pennant by at least two games," he has told his friends.

"We have the team and all we need is the breaks," he said.

The Browns are the most impressive team that we have seen so far on a tour of the camps and they look like a sure shot for the pennant or second place at the lowest.

The Job That Came to Helen

By JANE OSBORN

(Copyright.)

"PETER, you don't understand," said Helen for the tenth time that evening. It was midsummer then and they were walking together along the ocean's edge.

"Cut that out about my not understanding," said Peter, not without some courtesy. "I understand what you think just because you have spent four years in college and have come off with a degree you are too well educated to be my wife. Rot and rubbish! What I also understand is that I love you very much, in spite of your foolish notions, and that you are not the sort of girl, Helen De Voe, who is going to be content with just a career. If that's what you call it."

"I'll always go on caring a great deal for you, Peter," she said and there was a little quiver in her voice. "Only now that I've got my degree I really think I ought to use it. I can't give up my ideals—even for you, Peter."

Helen wanted to succeed in some sort of business. So one fine day she went to the city carrying with her some nice little letters of introduction to officers of several banks and bond concerns which she had begged from the president of her home bank.

As for the bank officers—they didn't even take the trouble to see her. Helen was told that she would have to send in a request by mail for an appointment if she wished to see them. So she tried her luck with the bond dealers and brokers. She was utterly unprepared for the cool reception she received.

Then one day she managed to see a Mr. Kelly, vice president or something of one of the business offices to which she had contrived to get a letter of introduction.

"I don't want anyone around here to help run this business," he growled after she had hopefully recounted her qualifications. "Our pay roll is too long as it is. Nobody's really interested. They just do their own little jobs and draw their salaries and hurry home at half-past four. Do you think any of the girls around here would take it upon themselves to see that my private office was kept cleaned? Not much. All they'd have to do would be to keep after the cleaning woman—stay after hours once in a while to see that she did the work. But no, they wouldn't think of such a thing."

"I'm sorry," said Helen, and after Mr. Kelly had further unburdened himself and somehow apologized to Helen for troubling her with what didn't interest her, she took her departure.

"But I am interested—and perhaps what you have said will give me an idea," she said. "One or two of the other men I've talked to seemed to have trouble of somewhat the same sort."

But when Helen reached her home that week-end she was thoroughly discouraged. True, she had a little plan in the back of her mind, but when she came to consider it, it didn't seem so very good after all. Late that Saturday afternoon she telephoned to Peter.

"I'm sorry I said what I did to you," she said. "Maybe it is cowardly, but I'm going to ask you to give me another chance. You see, I don't believe that there ever would be a chance for me in the big business world. Why, the only possible chance I saw was to turn to and keep offices clean. Honestly I actually worked out a sort of scheme of hiring some cleaning women and opening a little office to take contracts for cleaning offices and personally supervising the whole matter. I wrote to Mr. Kelly about it. But nothing came even of that. So, Peter, if you want me you can have me."

And of course Peter took Helen in his arms, beyond measure pleased to find her in this humble frame of mind. Of course, he knew that Helen was accepting him because she had found no chance in business.

A few days later came a letter, signed by one J. H. Kelly.

"I didn't see any chance of giving you a job," said Mr. Kelly, "but since reading your letter and considering your plans for an office-cleaning agency I think perhaps we could come to some agreement. I see you have brains and courage. I'm interested in your plan and would be willing to back such a venture and finance it. We could make it a sort of side issue. Meantime you could be of real use to me here in this office, and I guess I could mention a salary that would appeal to you."

Helen read the letter at first with eagerness. This Mr. Kelly, she had found out, was a thoroughly reliable business man of high standing. And he had appreciated her qualifications—he really felt that he could make use of her.

Helen reread the letter and put it in her desk. She would answer it later in the day. Meantime she must keep her appointment with Peter. They were going to consult with an architect about building a little dovecot for two.

Sees Composition as

Eradicator of Slang

Composition is the most effective means of eradicating slang, says Rams MacDonald, former prime minister of England.

"Youths practiced in writing down their thoughts will very rarely practice slang for their conversation," he declared. "Slang is one of the most certain signs of decadent minds. It is not only murder of good English, but it murders truth itself."

"The use of slang is a fraud upon yourself. You imagine you are clever and impressive, but as a matter of fact you are exactly the opposite. It is a fraud on your friends because you mislead them. You pretend to tell them what you are thinking when as a matter of fact you are doing nothing of the kind. It is the resort of the lazy and slovenly."

Three Rows From the Front

By H. LOUIS RAYBOLD

(Copyright.)

The great singer, bowing graciously to the applause inspired by his opening selection, noticed that the girl was there again, three rows from the front and in the center.

He had first seen her in Oakland, then in Denver, and had continued to find her at each recital in the various cities he visited on his coast-to-coast tour. Always she sat, as now, rapt, adoring, and at the close of each song, clapping with her little hands to the music.

He seized his accompanist, young Pierre Diderot, and led him forward, at which the little hands clapped harder than ever at the great singer's generosity in sharing the plaudits of the audience.

Unfortunately for his peace of mind, the girl was getting to be a necessity to the man. He had grown to look for her first of all, and if by any chance she was late he heart sank. And then when she did come in, her mauve evening cape over her slender arm, he revived again like a drooping plant after the drought of a desert.

To his audience Orloff Stiechensky was the great master, superb and supreme. To his manager, he was a refractory child who, if properly contrived, could be made to sing the most difficult of songs. To his friends, he was a man of fact who you are exactly the opposite. It is a fraud on your friends because you mislead them. You pretend to tell them what you are thinking when as a matter of fact you are doing nothing of the kind. It is the resort of the lazy and slovenly."

Therefore, when, during the brief intermission, Orloff remarked that he was sending a note by an usher asking a certain charming lady to sing the next song, the manager frowned. But he very well knew that it was poor business to cross Orloff in the middle of a recital. He was quite capable of refusing to appear at all again that evening.

Yet something must be done. "Very well," he said to Orloff resignedly. "Give me your note and I give you my word I will deliver it at once. There, they are still clapping you. You must go on again."

It was after his rendering of an old Polish folk song that Orloff saw an usher approach the occupant of the center seat three rows from the front and after that the girl sat for a long time with her head bowed. When she finally raised it he could see that her eyes were shining.

From the stage Orloff hurried from the stage to clasp the slender hand of a dark-haired girl and gaze into a pair of steady eyes.

"I am flattered by your regular attendance at my recitals," he said, speaking slowly, for his English was never at its best during emotional moments. "You are my inspiration."

The girl raised her face and looked at him. "Thank you," she said quietly. "You are to me the greatest of masters. But it is your pianist that I pursue. Pierre. We are to be married soon, but I follow to keep my eyes on him. These young artists are like wax in the hands of the flatterer."

DIED SUDDENLY

William M. Spickler, of Clearport, Passed Away in His 69th Year.

William M., son of Samuel Y. and Sarah Ann Spickler, was born near Clearport, Fairport county, April 2, 1857.

He was the oldest son of a family of eight children, two of whom, sisters Caroline and Matilda R., had preceded him in death.

After receiving a common school education, he began farming, under his father's instructions, and followed the same for several years.

He accepted a position as clerk in the grocery department of the late D. B. Wagner, of Circleville, and remained in his employ until the death of his employer.

About thirty-two years ago, he located in Columbus, and engaged in a loan business, which he successfully conducted until a year ago when he concluded to retire from business and reap the reward of his labors.

He was a man of good business acumen ever faithful and true with those whom he had business relations. He was intensely interested in the success and health of his sisters and brothers and with a brother's love, zealously looked after their welfare.

His friendship for all was so sincere and his personality so winsome, that his memory will ever remain treasured in the heart of those who knew him.

On February 11, while in the home in which he had resided for the past 26 years, he suffered a severe heart attack from which he quickly recovered, and apparently was in good health, when on Thursday night, March 4, he suffered an acute heart attack, the suffocating breast pains of which caused him pains of untold agony, yet he bore them all without a murmur until death relieved him of his suffering, Saturday, March 6, at the age of 68 years, 11 months and four days.

He leaves to mourn four sisters, Mrs. Samantha Bussert, of Revenge; Mrs. Clara Bailey, of Lancaster; Mrs. Fannie Dunn, Clearport; Mrs. Ella Benson, of Columbus, and one brother, Lewis Spickler, of Newark; a number of other relatives and a large circle of friends.

Funeral services were held at his place of residence on Tuesday morning at 11:30 conducted by Rev. Earl Mason, Amehansley, of Lancaster, and interment took place on the family lot in Mt. Carmel cemetery, Clearport.—Lancaster Daily Eagle.

AMUSEMENTS

No "candle at the window" action in the new William de Mille-Paramount production, "New Brooms" which is the feature at the Met theater.

This is not the usual "mother and son" story. Instead it is a beautiful love story, a story simply told, in which the deep silent love a father holds for his son is paramount. There is splendid comedy relief, and a novel idea is introduced in the form of a new triangle.

Bessie Love, Neil Hamilton and Phyllis Love are featured in the leading roles of the production which was written for the screen by Clara Beranger from Frank Craven's Broadway stage success of the same name.

The scene of the story is a small American city of the present day. The story—a domestic comedy of the sort that de Mille handles so well—centers around an upstairs son just out of college who arrives home with ideas of his own as to how his father's flourishing broom business should be conducted.

So it is that the father turns over his business to the boy to run as he sees fit for a given period. And suffice it to say that the scenes that follow are riots. The boy makes a botch of the job and he is admitted to his father that he is a failure.

But Bessie Love is the girl in the story and the boy wins her so he isn't so much of a failure at that.

Don't miss this one on a bet. It's the finest de Mille comedy of the American home of them all.

Some persons are born poor, some achieve poverty and some thrust poverty upon others.

Changed His Mind

The manager of a large warehouse in Glasgow who was much disliked received an offer from an English firm and had all but decided to give up his Glasgow job. His fellow employees thereupon collected a purse of money and presented it to him as a thank offering on the occasion of his departure. "Weel, weel," said Scottie as he took the purse. "I never thought ye liket me sae weel, but noo that I see ye've aye vexed at me gang awa' I think I'll no gang, but jist bid adieu I am!"—Montreal Witness.

Small Boy's Criticism Finds Echo in Europe

Foreign policies were under discussion when George Wilhelm, the noted war correspondent, remarked:

"There is no question that what European rule has greatly benefited are the principalities in countless ways but divisions of territory are none the less irksome."

"Most of the princelings find themselves in the position of the small boy who had been instructed by his mother not to ask for a second piece of cake. Johnny eyed his empty plate wistfully and then said:

"Mother, you is a fine cake baker. Then, when his mother did not take the hint, he added: 'But you 'clined to cut the pieces too small.'"

Travels of Ducks

Wild ducks do not go helter-skelter north and south when the seasons change, says the Baltimore Sun. They travel by well-defined air lanes, explaining why out of 10,000 lakes in Minnesota, for instance, there are about 9,000 where a wild duck is never seen. These lanes in the air are known as duck "passes" and invariably new flocks find them, and year in and year out travel the same course.

MINE DISASTER

Eccles, W. Va., March 11.—(U.P.)—Work of clearing the number 5 shaft of the Crab Orchard Improvement Company of debris caused by the explosion of Monday night, was continued today as rescuers worked frantically to free two men believed still alive.

During the night workers recovered another body, bringing the total number of dead removed to 15.

Two more men are known to be dead and it was expected their bodies would be recovered some time today.

One miner, rescued with 40 others from shaft No. 6, died Monday night.

At an examination a boy, asked to state why a tiger is striped, wrote: "It is striped because it makes it better for circus proprietors. If a tiger escapes from a circus it is easier to find him than if he had no stripes. He will not go far without someone noticing that he is not a horse or a dog, on account of his stripes, and calling up and asking the circus people if they have lost a tiger."

Japan Leads Fish Eaters

Japan leads in the consumption of fish per capita per annum. There it is about 200 pounds per person, per year, while in England, also a big fish-eating country, it is 45 to 50 pounds per person a year. In Canada, where fishing is a big industry, the consumption is about 25 pounds per person a year.

Sweet Clover Is Leading Legumes

Crop Is Entitled to Position in Front Rank as Soil Improver.

Chemical investigations which are being made on different legume plants by the college of agriculture, University of Illinois, indicate that common biennial sweet clover is entitled to the position which it has held among the front rank legumes for soil improvement, according to E. E. DeTurk, chief of soil technology.

Alfalfa is a crop of great promise as a combination feed and soil improvement crop, but it is not so well adapted to direct use for green manure as is sweet clover. Red clover, which has enjoyed more than a half-century of recognition as an old standby, is gradually giving way to alfalfa and sweet clover, in part, at least, because of the uncertainty of securing satisfactory stands. Dalea, a comparatively new crop, offers but little promise, while Korean lespedeza, which is just making its debut, bids fair to be a satisfactory acid land crop in the south half of the state, where liming is either pending or in localities where liming is impracticable.

Soil Improving Crops.

While certain nonlegume plants have value as soil improvers, through the addition of organic matter and the conversion of insoluble mineral elements into more readily available forms, the most important soil improving crops will always be restricted to the legume family, because of the added advantage of these plants in fixation of atmospheric nitrogen.

Growing crops and bacteria, like human beings, are prone to save energy. Energy is required in the fixation of atmospheric nitrogen. Consequently both legume crops, even though well inoculated, and their nodule bacteria as well, will absorb and utilize nitrate nitrogen from the soil when it is present, in preference to working harder for the air supply. Thus soils that are already well supplied with available nitrogen do not benefit as much from the growing of legumes as do poorer soils which are more greatly in need of building up.

Most Desirable Legumes.

The most desirable soil-building legumes are all acid-sensitive crops, so that on acid land their use is conditioned upon the use of limestone. Some areas of acid land in Illinois are so inaccessible to liming facilities as to make the problem of soil improvement by means of limestone and legumes a serious one. It is probable that acid land so situated could be managed to the best advantage by either devoting it to forestry or other special uses or else building it up by the use of limestone and the proper use of legumes. It is questionable whether such land can ever be maintained permanently profitable under general farming in which the cropping system is restricted to acid land crops. There is not enough evidence upon which one can make dogmatic statements in this regard. However, it is unquestionable that the production which can be maintained permanently under such conditions is at a markedly lower level than where the acid condition of the soil is corrected.

How to Fail in Dairying
Told by Iowa Specialist

A sure way to avoid having a lot of milking to do is to follow the suggestions offered below, according to Burt Okerirk, dairy production extension specialist, Iowa State college.

Keep the milking cows in the corn-stalks to dry them up before winter—It is difficult to milk by lantern light. Feed timothy hay, straw or corn-stalks because these are low in protein, a muscle builder—the cows can be handled easier.

Don't use balanced rations. Don't use a silo—silage stimulates production.

Have a pitchfork ready at all times to teach cows their places. Always pet them with a milk stool.

Keep 30 cows that produce 150 pounds of fat each rather than 15 that average 300 pounds of fat.

Keep a scrub bull or cow freshener.

FARM FACTS

Have the weed trees all been taken from your woodlot?

Jabbing the reins or continued tapping with the whip soon will teach the young colt to be an old loafer.

Keep calves and young stock growing in a thrifty condition. Their future usefulness depends largely upon present care.

If properly planned a crop rotation will add materially in distributing the farm labor and will greatly reduce the amount of outside help required for the efficient operation of the farm.

The more pigs saved per litter the more profit there is in hog production so give the brood sow plenty of exercise, enough, but not an overabundance of food, and see that her pen is clean and dry.

While trees and shrubs are dormant caterpillar nests and egg masses of various insects may be seen readily. Burn the nests with a torch of kerosene soaked rags, and paint the egg masses with a solution of creosote.

Set Them an Example
You will find that things are pretty sure to go right if you do.

RICH MAN'S SON SENTENCED
FOR LIFE

Mason, Mich., March 11.—(U.P.)—Sentenced to life imprisonment, Arthur Rich, of Battle Creek, was to leave here today for Jackson State prison branch to pay the penalty demanded by the state of Michigan for criminally assaulting Louise King, a Battle Creek college girl. The son of a wealthy steel products manufacturer, was found guilty by a circuit court jury after 25 minutes deliberation late yesterday, following a bitterly contested 20-day re-trial.

Denying a stay of sentence, Judge Chas. B. Collingwood briefly conferred with Rich in his private chambers, returned to the court and immediately imposed the maximum penalty possible under the laws of the state.

Rich was held to have brutally beaten the 20-year-old girl with his fists, fracturing her jaw in five places and then criminally assaulting her during a stroll on a Battle Creek golf course last May.

Sheep Carried All
Summer on Pasture

Use of Forage Crops Is Practical Feed Plan.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)
Use of forage crops for pasturing sheep in summer is a practical means of feeding them, according to the results of experiments conducted by the United States Department of Agriculture on its experiment farm at Beltsville, Md. Observations were made not only of the gains in weight but also of the general condition of the animals, including resistance to disease and parasites.

The crops used in this system of pastures in the order of use were as follows: Fall-sown rye, wheat, winter barley, oats, and Canada field peas, soy beans, corn and velvet beans, fall-sown winter barley, and winter wheat.

It was shown that sheep can be raised successfully by using such crops as cowpeas, soy beans, and like plants to provide the entire summer pasturage. The method was beneficial also in the control of stomach worms and other internal parasites. By the method lambs can be grown to market weights without being visibly affected by parasite infestation. A frequent rotation of pasture made possible by this system is beneficial, but not entirely adequate, in controlling parasites of sheep carried on the farm throughout the year.

Maximum Production of the Average Dairy Cow

The average dairy cow reaches her maximum production at the age of five years. The amount of milk produced at the fourth lactation period, or when the cow is five years old, is about one and one-half times more than that produced during the first lactation period as a two-year-old. Milk flow will not diminish until the cow has reached old age, which is usually considered ten years. However, one should consider a cow eight years old or over as aged. A seven-year-old cow is not considered old, and providing she is a profitable producer she should not be butchered.

The average cow will probably start to lose her teeth at the age of eight years; however, again this is a consideration that cannot be given a definite answer owing to the fact that the individuality of each animal must enter into the consideration.

In determining whether a cow is a good milk animal or not one should not base their conclusion entirely upon the amount of milk produced when the animal first freshens. The profitable cow is the long-time producer.

A cow to be a "good" producer in your section of the country should give at least 200 pounds of butterfat. Cows that give 300 pounds of butterfat or more per year are not at all uncommon.

Son of Proven Sire Is Fit to Head Dairy Herd

Very painstaking investigations at the Missouri experiment station demonstrate the importance of selecting bulls from sires having high-producing daughters. The conclusion is reached that a son of a proven sire and out of a large record dam is the best sire if you cannot obtain a proven sire.

Many breeders at the present time are placing considerable emphasis on the production of the dam in selecting young bulls. The Missouri investigation demonstrated that the dam's record is on the average a poor guide as to her ability to produce high-producing sons. The investigation was under the direction of A. C. Ragsdale, head of the department of dairy husbandry. Details are found in research bulletin No. 79 of the Missouri experiment station, Columbia.

Save Chicken Manure

Chicken manure is one of the most valuable fertilizers produced on the farm. It is especially rich in nitrogen, and since this is one of the essential elements that plants must have for growth, it should be saved.

The practice of most farmers to have no dropping boards under the roosts is wasteful. With a properly constructed dropping board one may scrape or rake off the manure into an old tub or bucket, and load it onto the wagon in a few minutes.

Curry Comb and Brush

The thorough, yet gentle use of curry comb and brush does for an animal what a bath and clean shirt do for man. It gives the skin a better chance to perform its important functions; it makes the hair coat more adequate as a protection against inclement weather; it is an excellent preventive for certain external parasites; it makes for good health as well as good looks. At no time is it more essential to animal well-being than during winter.

Spread Manure Green

Manures can be spread so much more lightly when green, whether by hand or the spreader, that there is a great saving of material. The idea that land needs a heavy coat of manure is erroneous most lands giving far better results with two light coverings than one heavy covering in a given number of years. As the course of nearly all decaying matter is downward, the longer it remains on or near the surface, the better results you will get.

CABLE REPAIR AT SEA IS THRILLING

Broken Strand Calls Out Ship in All Weather.

New York.—Stretching out and away, like a tiny thread of life itself, the transatlantic cable from Cape Cod to Brest usually connects the Old world with the New.

But sometimes it breaks! When this happens there is much concern in the offices of the French Cable company—a breathless suspense, while delicate instruments are locating the break. Often it is near the middle of the ocean, and when the break is located the cable repair ship Edouard Jeramec is dispatched to the scene.

A marine oddity, the Jeramec is one of the finest cable ships afloat. Huge tanks below decks house 250 miles of deep-sea cables. Grappling hooks of all descriptions, weighted to sink them three miles below the surface, are stowed properly away. Buoys to mark the ends of cable when located, are lashed on deck. Powerful winches, fore and aft, are ready to roll in or out the heavy strands.

It is heart-breaking work, this locating the broken ends of a deep-sea cable. Capt. Julien Le Martelu and his crew will assure anyone. In Europe and America, cable transmission is hindered while the Jeramec steams slowly back and forth, groping about the ocean floor. Howling winds and lashing seas must be disregarded. Huge lights transform night into day, and the work continues.

Often the cable is located and the business of bringing it to the surface, a matter of eight hours' work, is begun. And often it almost reaches the deck of the ship, only to break again and slide mockingly back to its resting place in the mud and silt of the bottom.

TAPS SOUNDED FOR VETERAN OF CIVIL WAR

Christopher Rebstock Died at Home in Clarksburg in His 93rd Year.

An aged, respected and sterling citizen of Clarksburg, one of the last of the thinning ranks of veterans of the Civil war, answered the final summons at 10 o'clock Wednesday evening, March 10, in the death of Christopher Rebstock.

Mr. Rebstock was born in Baden, Germany on March 30, 1833, and was in his 93d year at the time of his death. Except for time served in the Army of the Republic, he had lived continuously in Clarksburg since 1858.

Christopher Rebstock was married in 1858 to Sarah Woodsley of Circleville and immediately the couple took up residence at Clarksburg. To the union eleven children were born, four of whom, Mrs. Frank Ater, Mrs. Thomas Ater, Charles Rebstock and Mrs. Jerome Kemney preceded him to the grave.

Seven children survive: Frank, William, Carey, James, Ernest, Della and Fanny. The deceased had made his home with James and Ernest since the death of the wife July 30, 1924. Twenty-one grandchildren and 46 great-grandchildren survive.

Christopher Rebstock enlisted in Co., A, of the 155th regiment of Ohio Volunteer Infantry, May 2, 1864, at Camp Dennison. On May 8, he was mustered into the United States service by Captain R. L. Smith. Along with other members of the company Mr. Rebstock was relieved from service at Camp Dennison, August 27, 1864.

Funeral services will be held from the Clarksburg M. E. church Saturday at 2 o'clock with Rev. Stevenson in charge. Interment at Brown's chapel.—News-Advertiser.

Use Bamboo in India to Make Paper Pulp

Philadelphia.—The successful issue of the experiments carried out for some years in India by William Raitt is now reported, says the Edinburgh Scotsman. The Indian forest records contain a summary of the investigations on bamboo and grasses for the paper pulp by Mr. Raitt, who is officer in charge of the paper pulp section of the Forest Research Institute and college at Dehra Dun.

There were many difficulties to be overcome: (1) A method to be evolved of pulping bamboo so that the percentage of bleach required was reduced within economic limits; (2) a reduction in quantity of caustic soda required to reduce the raw material to pulp, and (3) the preparation of the raw material to a fit state for digestion.

It is stated that the economy in the case of bamboo amounts to 15 per cent, on present manufacturing charges for materials and chemicals only. Mr. Raitt, however, says that if the saving in recovery, coal, labor and fixed charges up to the bleached pulp stage are taken into account, the total reduction in cost will be well over 20 per cent.

No Credit Coming to Him

A Portland (Maine) window dresser unconsciously earned a tribute for self-restraint, because, though receiving a painful injury while tacking a sheet in a window, he retired quietly and without a murmur. A friend expressed his surprise at the stoicism of the window dresser. The latter retorted: "How in the blankety-blank could I swear with my mouth full of tacks?"

THE EARTH OPENS ITS JAWS IN KANSAS

LOW RUMBLING SOUNDS COME FROM A JAGGED HOLE

Belief That the Huge Crater Which Is Growing Wider Is An Extinct Volcano—The Natural Phenomenon Is Attracting the Curious From All Over the State—Green Water Spurts From Its Inky Depths and Fumes of Sulphur Are Emitted.

The "Bottomless Pit," which suddenly yawned Tuesday morning in the dry, sandy bed of Smoky Hill river four miles southeast of Sharon Springs, Kansas, is gradually sucking in the earth for 500 feet around.

A jagged fissure is encircling the gigantic hole, which is 150 feet long and 100 feet wide, and nobody knows exactly how deep.

Since the hole opened with a low rumble, water has risen 40 or 50 feet out of the darkness 150 feet below. It is pale green. On its surface floats the carcass of a cow, which went down when the earth opened. Whiffs of sulphur, like the odor of gunpowder, float up at intervals while patches of bubbles, which many believe are caused by gas, appear on the surface of the slowly rising water.

Old citizens of Sharon Springs believe the disturbance is the last sputter of an almost extinct volcano. The topography of the vicinity tends to substantiate their theory.

One approaches the overflat land from the east, entering the dry sand of the river bed, in the middle of which, until Tuesday, there was a sheet of shallow water, known as the Smoky Hill basin. Old residents remember when Smoky Hill was a "bottomless" pool, 25 or 30 years ago. It was filled up with shale and clay from a mysterious source.

Rising about Smoky Hill basis was a higher bench of plain, broken, sharply at the edge and sloping gently for 25 feet to the basin, this was solid grazing land.

It was the heart of this arroyo which collapsed Tuesday morning. Hundreds of tons of limestone, clay and shale suddenly tumbled downward.

Miss Sylvia Forshey, daughter of E. S. Forshey, ranchman, a mile north ward, heard a low rumble and saw a bluish cloud of dust or smoke. She thought it was a prairie fire. A party investigated and found the hole, then only 50 feet wide, and descending conically into darkness.

The shallow water in Smoky Hill basin poured into the hole. Two springs on the wall of the hole spouted down into the darkness. The water rose to visibility Thursday morning and the hole yawned wider.

Ground upon which visitors stood Thursday is gone today.

Hundreds of residents of Wallace county and neighboring counties are motoring to the scene. Little groups venture beyond the great fissures, certain of which are five feet wide and visibly expanding.

S. J. Chisum, sheriff of Wallace county, prepared to rope off the site, fearing sightseers may go down with the crumbling earth.

Edgar Heyl, employe of the electric plant, a rope around his waist, ventured out on the tottering slabs of earth split from the mainland. Other youths, also held by ropes, sat on the edge of the vortex and pushed the crackling slabs into the hole with their feet.

It is interesting to note that the sand in the bed of the river slopes, reappearing several miles below. It appears that a subterranean river lies beneath. Yet engineers say the hole would crack along its course, if such were the case, rather than the form of a conical hole.

But where have the hundreds of tons of rock and soil gone? Whence come the sulphur fumes and the gas? It is a matter of conjecture. Many wonder whether the phenomenon is an explanation of the river's name, Smoky Hill. A strange blue haze hangs over the narrow bed thru the summer. Perhaps the Indian tribes who named it, saw Smoky Hill basin smoke centuries ago with volcanic action. There is said to be a deposit of pumice stone 20 miles southeastward.

MYSTERIOUS MURDER.

Cleveland, O., March 12, (UP).—Four men were assigned by Prosecutor E. C. Stanton today to investigate the mysterious murder of Samuel Volpe, of Canton, Ohio, whose body was found recently in the snow on a knoll in Pepper Pike village. The assignments were made after Sheriff Fred Kohler said he had "no money and no men" to carry on the inquiry. Local police had turned the case over to Kohler.

Columbus—Reports from Troy that a representative of the attorney general's office has joined in the investigation of the Frances Drake Nesbitt mystery, were declared unfounded by Attorney General Crabbe Thursday afternoon.

Reports from Troy said Bert B. Buckley, a Dayton attorney, is taking part in the investigation at the request of Crabbe.

"If Buckley has joined the inquiry he has done so on his own initiative and not by order of my department," Crabbe said.

Cleveland—First report of the federal grand jury on the huge alcohol fraud centering about the Superior Industrial Alcohol company of Cleveland has been postponed from today to Saturday, it was learned at the federal building here.

This is due to the absence of District Attorney A. E. Bernstein and his first assistant, Miles E. Evans, who are to return here from Cincinnati. Bernstein and Evans with special intelligence bureau agent, George Golding say they will ask about 125 indictments in the alcohol case.

JOSIAH KIRBY INDICTED FOR JURY FIXING

Charged With Offering Member Fee of $1000 for Vote for Acquittal.

Cleveland —An indictment charging Josiah Kirby, former head of the defunct Cleveland Discount company with jury fixing, was returned by the federal grand jury Thursday afternoon. Kirby is already in the county jail awaiting sentence in his conviction for using the mails to defraud.

The indictment charges that Kirby on December 28, in Akron, procured Attorney William R. Irvin of that city to approach Latham H. Conger, a prospective juror for Kirby's federal court trials, in an effort to induce Conger to get on the jury and vote for Kirby's acquittal.

Kirby was charged thru Irvin, to have offered Conger payment of losses and expenses incurred by jury duty and a fee of $1000 if he voted for acquittal. The indictment was in two counts—one charging an attempt to obstruct justice and the other an attempt to influence a prospective juror.

Details surrounding the alleged transaction were given by Irvin in an interview.

INCOMPETENT TEACHERS.

Columbus, O., March 12, (UP) There are thousands of incompetent teachers in Ohio, State Director of Education Vernon M. Riegel declared in a letter today to county superintendents.

"This incompetency," Riegel said, "is becoming alarming and in time may become 'educational degeneracy.' Incompetent teachers make incompetent pupils and the latter, in turn, make incompetent teachers," he said.

"Education rather than legislation is the cure for many difficulties of the profession," he declared.

INSANE MAN STAGED FIGHT WITH HIS GUN

Barricaded Himself in House But Was Finally Captured by Policemen.

Toledo, Ohio, March 12, (UP). After barricading himself in a house here, Steve Lashley, 71, said to have gone violently insane, staged a two hour gun battle with police early today before he was shot and captured.

Lashley began his rampage shortly after midnight, according to police, first threatening roomers in the house and later pursuing a woman and her two small children.

The woman and the children managed to lock themselves in a room. Lashley, apparently determined to kill them, fired thru the door.

Police were summoned but when they attempted to gain entrance to the house, found Lashley in command. He fired upon them as they advanced.

Repulsed by the man's fire, police withdrew to a distance, held a conference, then surrounded the house. They advanced steadily, but two hours elapsed before one of them shot Lashley enabling them to capture him.

As a delegate to the Womans' Missionary conference held in Columbus, February 11, Mrs. H. H. Groce gave an interesting and thoro report. On account of sickness, the musical numbers planned for this meeting were postponed. During the social hour lunch was served by the March committee.

St. Patrick's Day to Be Observed Widely Throughout the U. S.

St. Patrick's Day parties will be more popular this year than they ever were before, according to indications. Not only are the descendants of St. Patrick's adopted country celebrating on March 17, but the day is fast becoming one of almost countrywide observation.

Of course, this color scheme for a St. Patrick's celebration ought to be carried out in green or in green and white, including the prizes. A variety case with a bit of green enamel, a green leather address book, or handkerchiefs with green borders of embroidery, are acceptable presents.

Even the refreshments can be made very suggestive of the day, as is shown by the following recipes and menus:

Cream of Pea Soup
Battered Green Beans
Pigs in Blankets
Irish Salad
Patrick Sandwiches
Pistachio Ice Cream
White Gales
Coffee or Tea

Cream of Pea Soup
1 No. 2 can peas
Cold water
1 slice onion
1 1/2 tsp. sugar
1 tsp. salt
Pepper
1 cup evaporated milk
1 cup water or stock
1 tsp. flour
1 tsp. butter

Make a white sauce of the diluted evaporated milk, flour, butter, salt and pepper. Drain the liquid from the peas. Add sufficient water to the liquid to make one pint and return to the peas. Add the onion and sugar and boil for five minutes then rub through a sieve. There should be two and one-half cups of pulp and liquid. Combine pulp and white sauce. Serve immediately. Serves six.

Pigs in Blankets
12 large oysters
12 slices bacon
12 half-slices hot toast
1 cup evaporated milk
1 cup chicken stock
Dash seasonings
1 tsp. salt
1 tsp. butter
1 1/2 tsp. sugar
1 tsp. salt
Pepper

Sprinkle oysters with salt and pepper and wrap each in a slice of bacon, fastening with a toothpick. Broil or pan-fry until bacon is crisp. Serve on toast and pour over a white sauce made of the butter, flour, salt, pepper, and diluted milk.

Shamrock Salad
2 green peppers
1 cup cottage cheese
2 tbsp. evaporated milk
1/4 tsp. cayenne pepper
2 tsp. chopped nuts
Salt
1 tbsp. cream

Cut off stem end of pepper, remove seeds and soak in cold water for at least ten minutes. Combine cheese, milk, cream and nuts and season with salt and pepper. Pack peppers tightly with cheese mixture. Stand in refrigerator until ready to serve. Slice across thinly, and lay three or four slices (according to size of pepper) on a bed of water cress in such a fashion as to resemble a shamrock. Make a stem out of a slice of green pepper.

LOANS UP TO $500.00.

Any commodity you buy is worth a certain fixed sum of cash—no more and no less. Yet there is a tendency among retailers to have two prices—one the cash price and another the time price. Some concerns mark up the time price and then allow a certain discount for cash—others mark everything on a cash basis and add on a lump sum carrying charge for time.

Now the difference between the time and cash price is interest—nothing else; and the rate you pay and the risk you run depends entirely on the integrity of the concern you deal with.

By borrowing the money from the City Loan and dealing for cash you eliminate all risk and get full benefit of cash prices.

NEW NEWSPAPER

In Washington, D. C., Gets Warm Welcome.

Washington, March 4.—The United States Daily, David Lawrence's newspaper, made its first appearance in Washington this morning. Its purpose is: "All the facts—no opinion."

The first issue contained sixteen pages. It presents the official news of Washington—executive, legislative and judicial; all the "hand-outs" from all the departments and a summary of the whole daily activities of the government, displayed under regular news heads and with all the typographical display of the ordinary newspaper.

It contains no editorial page and no signed stories, and it met with a particularly gratifying reception in the capital.

The presses ran off 30,000 copies. The conductors of the new daily report every news stand was sold out.

The officials of the government particularly were pleased. They all have a tremendous output of government information and it has been one of their sorrows that nowhere was it all printed. Politics was strictly eschewed.

Inside were the proceedings of Tuesday's session of House and Senate condensed from the Congressional Record, as well as a tabulation of measures pending in both houses and their present status, as well as a summary of their proceedings up to date.

It will be useful as a reference publication. The initial number contains no advertisements, but a notice is printed that the columns will be open for advertisements April 5.

The founders of the paper include Owen D. Young, Mrs. McDill McCormick, Otto H. Kahn, Edward W. Bok, Robert Lansing, Albert Lasker, John W. Weeks, Simon Guggenheim, Bernard M. Baruch, James W. Gerard, E. T. Meredith, Julius Rosenwald, C. Bascom Slomp, Mary Roberts Rinehart, Anne Morgan, E. M. House, Clarence H. Mackay and John W. Davis.

STEAMER AMERICA

Badly Damaged By Fire At Newport News, Va.

Washington, March 10.—(UP.)—Fire broke out aboard the U. S. Lines steamer America at Newport News, Va., today and spread so rapidly that it appeared the craft would be a total loss, according to Emergency Fleet corporation advices this afternoon.

A fire boat put out from Norfolk across the roads from Newport News, to aid in fighting the fire and was joined also by a shipping board tug.

Details as to men aboard or cause of fire were lacking.

The America was being repaired at Newport News.

The America is a one class cabin vessel and one of the larger ships of the U. S. lines fleet. Before the war she was owned by the Hamburg-American line and was known as the Amerika. She has been running from New York to Plymouth, Cherbourg and Bremen.

The America is a twin screw

model of 17,500 horsepower. She is 687 feet long with a displacement of 34,575 tons and is of 21,145 registered tons. Her value is placed between $3,000,000 and $4,000,000.

WOMEN'S CLUBS BACK THE 18TH AMENDMENT

Cincinnati, March 10.—Unqualified support to the eighteenth amendment as we now have it is the policy of the general as well as the Ohio State Federation of Women's Clubs, said Mrs. Charles R. Fox, president of the state federation, in an address before members of the Norwood Federation of Women's Clubs today.

"Whenever, in my capacity as president, I speak to club women, I also place before them the necessity of law observance and the upholding of the eighteenth amendment," Mrs. Fox added.

NATIONAL GAME

(By Henry L. Farrell, United Press Staff Correspondent.)
Tarpon Springs, Fla., March 11.—Listen to the chatter around the training camp of the St. Louis Browns and you will get the idea that the only doubtful entry in the 1926 world's series is the National League team.

George Sisler, the popular young manager of the club, makes no bones about his feeling. "We'll win the pennant by at least two games" he has told his friends.

"We have the team and all we need is the breaks," he said.

The Browns are the most impressive team that we have seen so far on a tour of the camps and they look like a sure shot for the pennant or second place at the lowest.

The Job That Came to Helen
By JANE OSBORN

(Copyright.)

"PETER, you don't understand," said Helen for the tenth time that evening. It was midsummer then and they were walking together along the ocean's edge.

"Cut that out about my not understanding," said Peter, not without some courtesy. "I understand what you think you mean—you mean that you think just because you have spent four years in college and have come off with a degree you are too well educated to be my wife. Rot and rubbish! What I also understand is that I love you very much, in spite of your foolish notions, and that you are not the sort of girl, Helen De Voe, who is going to be content with just a career. If that's what you call it."

"I'll always go on caring a great deal for you, Peter," she said and there was a little quiver in her voice. "Only now that I've got my degree I really think I ought to use it. I can't give up my ideals—even for you, Peter."

Helen wanted to succeed in some sort of business. So one fine day she went to the city carrying with her some nice little letters of introduction to officers of several banks and bond concerns which she had begged from the president of her home bank.

As for the bank officers—they didn't even take the trouble to see her. Helen was told that she would have to send in a request by mail for an appointment if she wished to see them. So she tried her luck with the bond dealers and brokers. She was utterly unprepared for the cool reception she received.

Then one day she managed to see a Mr. Kelly, vice president or something of one of the business offices to which she had contrived to get a letter of introduction.

"I don't want anyone around here to help run this business," he growled after she had hopefully recounted her qualifications. "Our pay roll is too long as it is. Nobody's really interested. They just do their own little jobs and draw their salaries and hurry home at half-past four. Do you think any of the girls around here would take it upon themselves to see that my private office was kept cleaned? Not much. All they'd have to do would be to keep after the cleaning woman—stay after hours once in a while to see that she did the work. But no, they wouldn't think of such a thing."

"I'm sorry," said Helen, and after Mr. Kelly had further unburdened himself and somehow apologized to Helen for troubling her with what didn't interest her, she took her departure.

"But I am interested—and perhaps what you have said will give me an idea," she said. "One or two of the other men I've talked to seemed to have trouble of somewhat the same sort."

But when Helen reached her home that week-end she was thoroughly discouraged. True, she had a little plan in the back of her mind, but when she came to consider it, it didn't seem so very good after all. Late that Saturday afternoon she telephoned to Peter.

"I'm sorry I said what I did to you," she said. "Maybe it is cowardly, but I'm going to ask you to give me another chance. You see, I don't believe that there ever would be a chance for me in the big business world. Why, the only possible chance I saw was to turn to and keep offices clean. Honestly I actually worked out a sort of scheme of hiring some cleaning women and opening a little office to take contracts for cleaning offices and personally supervising the whole matter. I wrote to Mr. Kelly about it. But nothing came even of that. So, Peter, if you want me you can have me."

And of course Peter took Helen in his arms, beyond measure pleased to find her in this humble frame of mind. Of course, he knew that Helen was accepting him because she had found no chance in business.

A few days later came a letter, signed by one J. H. Kelly.

"I didn't see any chance of giving you a job," said Mr. Kelly, "but since reading your letter and considering your plans for an office-cleaning agency I think perhaps we could come to some agreement. I see you have brains and courage. I'm interested in your plan and would be willing to back such a venture and finance it. We could make it a sort of side issue. Meantime you could be of real use to me here in this office, and I guess I could mention a salary that would appeal to you."

Helen read the letter at first with eagerness. This Mr. Kelly, she had found out, was a thoroughly reliable business man of high standing. And he had appreciated her qualifications—he really felt that he could make use of her.

Helen reread the letter and put it in her desk. She would answer it later in the day. Meantime she must keep her appointment with Peter. They were going to consult with an architect about building a little dovecot for two.

Custom Started by King
At the first performance of "The Messiah" in Westminster abbey, the effect produced upon George II was such that he started to his feet and remained standing until its conclusion. His example was followed by the entire congregation, and it has been customary ever since to stand during the performance of this chorus.

Church to Have Clinic

Dr. Thomas W. Jeffrey, pastor of the Central Methodist church of Spokane, Wash., plans to install a clinic for the physically ailing in his church, and if possible arrange for the issuance of a weekly newspaper to tell his members what is going on. The idea is to make of a church a practical social agency. Doctors who have membership in the church will be asked to operate the clinic as their special contribution to the work of the church.

Sees Composition asEradicator of Slang

Composition is the most effective means of eradicating slang, says Ramsay MacDonald, former prime minister of England.

"Youths practiced in writing down their thoughts will very rarely practice slang for their conversation," he declared. "Slang is one of the most certain signs of decadent minds. It is not only murder of good English, but it murders truth itself."

"The use of slang is a fraud upon yourself. You imagine you are clever and impressive, but as a matter of fact you are exactly the opposite. It is a fraud on your friends because you mislead them. You pretend to tell them what you are thinking when as a matter of fact you are doing nothing of the kind. It is the resort of the lazy and slovenly."

Three Rows From the FrontBy H. LOUIS RAYBOLD

(Copyright.)

THE great singer, bowing graciously to the applause inspired by his opening selection, noticed that the girl was there again, three rows from the front and in the center.

He had first seen her in Oakland, then in Denver, and had continued to find her at each recital in the various cities he visited on his coast-to-coast tour. Always she sat, as now, rapt, adoring, and, at the close of each song, clapping with her little hands.

He seized his accompanist, young Pierre Diderot, and led him forward, at which the little hands clapped harder than ever at the great singer's generosity in sharing the plaudits of the audience.

Unfortunately for his peace of mind, the girl was getting to be a necessity to the man. He had grown to look for her first of all, and if by any chance she was late his heart sank. And then when she did come in, her mauve evening cape over her slender arm, he revived again like a drooping plant after a shower, and was willing even to sing the "Volga Boat Song" as an encore.

To his audience Orloff Siechiensky was the great master, superb and supreme. To his manager, he was a refractory child who, if properly controlled and kept clear of entangling alliances with women who made fools of themselves over him, would continue to bring in with his golden voice vast sums of money at each performance.

Therefore, when, during the brief intermission, Orloff remarked that he was sending a note by an usher asking a certain charming lady to be shown into his presence, the manager frowned. But he very well knew that it was poor business to cross Orloff in the middle of a recital. He was quite capable of refusing to appear at all again that evening.

Yet something must be done. "Very well," he said to Orloff resignedly. "Give me your note and I give you my word I will deliver it at once. There, they are still clapping you. You must go on again."

It was after his rendering of an old Polish folk song that Orloff saw an usher approach the occupant of the center seat three rows from the front and after that the girl sat for a long time with her head bowed. When she finally raised it he could see that her eyes were shining.

After the last encore Orloff hurried from the stage to clasp the slender hand of a dark-haired girl and gaze into a pair of steady eyes.

"I am flattered by your regular attendance at my recitals," he said, speaking slowly, for his English was never at its best during emotional moments. "You are my inspiration."

The girl raised fathomless eyes to his. "Thank you," she said quietly. "You are to me the greatest of masters. But it is your pianist that I pursue, Pierre. We are to be married soon, but I follow to keep my eyes on him. These young artists are like wax in the hands of the flattering women. I have the time and the money, so I spend them both to keep him safe for me. Oh, I see him hardly at all. Once in a while a little dinner or a few words on the train"—she shrugged her shoulders.

Orloff's manager, carefully within earshot, grinned. "Bravo—bravo!" he said to himself. "The girl is a clever little actress. My suggestion and check, sent along with his note, were an inspiration. If only Pierre does not spoil it by bursting in and swearing he never saw the girl! How devilishly disagreeable Orloff looks with that frown on his forehead!"

Yes, Orloff looked for all the world like a very large little boy who sees a stick of candy about to be taken away from him. He had dropped the slender hand and was already sick of the interview.

"Pierre—Pierre!" she shouted suddenly, to the consternation of his manager.

"No—no, Siechiensky. Pierre has gone ahead to attend to your luggage." "What's that, monsieur?" Pierre rushed in hurriedly. "Did you wish—Nom de ciel, is it you whom I see—petite Eugenie? Pourquoi?"

"Ah, Pierre," the girl rushed into his arms. "The master sent for me and the other one—he wrote me this note and"—she held out a check and waved it in the direction of the manager, whom the rapid turns of his wheel of fortune had made speechless—"and I can't keep it because all I have said was the truth!"

"Oh," said the manager grandly. "Consider, my children, that it is my wedding present to you both."

Then: "Come, Siechiensky," he pleaded soothingly, "or you will miss your train and break the hearts of the two thousand people that await you."

Outside in the darkness he mopped his brow. It had the earmarks of a narrow escape.

Changed His Mind

The manager of a large warehouse in Glasgow who was much disliked, received an offer from an English firm and had all but decided to give up his Glasgow job. His fellow employees thereupon collected a purse of money and presented it to him as a thank offering on the occasion of his departure. "Weel, weel," said Scottie as he took the purse. "I never thought ye liket me sae weel, but noo that I see ye're sae vexed at me ganna' awa', I think I'll no gang, but jist bide shaur I am."—Montreal Witness.

DIED SUDDENLYWilliam M. Spickler, of Clearport, Passed Away in His 69th Year.

William M., son of Samuel Y. and Sarah Ann Spickler was born near Clearport, Fairfield county, April 2, 1857.

He was the oldest son of a family of eight children, two of whom, sisters Caroline and Matilda R., had preceded him in death.

After receiving a common school education, he began farming, under his father's instructions, and followed the same for several years.

He accepted a position as clerk in the grocery department of the late D. B. Wagner, of Circleville, and remained in his employ until the death of his employer.

About thirty-two years ago, he located in Columbus, and engaged in the loan business, which he successfully conducted until a year ago when he concluded to retire from business and reap the reward of his labors.

He was a man of good business acumen ever faithful and true with those whom he had business relations. He was intensely interested in the success and health of his sisters and brothers and with a brother's love, zealously looked after their welfare.

His friendship for all was so sincere and his personality so winsome, that his memory will ever remain treasured in the heart of those who knew him.

On February 11, while in the home in which he had resided for the past 26 years, he suffered a severe heart attack from which he quickly recovered, and apparently was in good health, when on Thursday night, March 4, he suffered an acute heart attack, the suffocating breast pangs of which caused him pains of untold agony, yet he bore them all without a murmur until death relieved him of his suffering, Saturday, March 6, at the age of 68 years, 11 months and four days.

He leaves to mourn four sisters, Mrs. Samantha Bussert, of Revenge; Mrs. Clara Bailey, of Lancaster; Mrs. Fannie Dumm, Clearport; Mrs. Ella Fosnaugh of Columbus, and one brother, Lewis Spickler, of Newark; a number of other relatives and a large circle of friends.

Funeral services were held at his place of residence on Tuesday morning at 11:30 conducted by Rev. Earl Mason Anneshauley, of Lancaster, and interment took place on the family lot in Mt. Carmel cemetery, Clearport.—Lancaster Daily Eagle.

AMUSEMENTS

No 'candle at the window' action in the new William de Mille-Paramount production, "New Brooms" which is the feature at the Met theater.

This is not the usual 'mother and son' story. Instead it is a beautiful love story, a story simply told, in which the deep silent love a father holds for his son is paramount. There is splendid comedy relief, and a novel idea is introduced in the form of a new triangle.

Bessie Love, Neil Hamilton and Phyllis Raver are featured in the leading roles of the production which was written for the screen by Clara Beranger from Frank Craven's Broadway stage success of the same name.

The scene of the story is a small American city of the present day. The story—a domestic comedy of the sort that de Mille handles so well—centers around an upstart son just out of college who arrives home with ideas of his own as to how his father's flourishing broom business should be conducted.

So it is that the father turns over his business to the boy to run as he sees fit for a given period. And suffice it to say that the scenes that follow are riots. The boy makes a botch of the job and has to admit to his father that he is a failure.

But Bessie Love is the girl in the story and the boy wins her so he isn't so much of a failure at that.

Don't miss this one on a bet. It's the finest de Mille comedy of the American home of them all.

Some persons are born poor, some achieve poverty and some thrust poverty upon others.

Small Boy's CriticismFinds Echo in Europe

Foreign policies were under discussion when George Wilmath, the noted war correspondent, remarked:

"There is no question but what European rule has greatly benefited eastern principalities in countless ways, but divisions of territory are none the less irksome."

"Most of the princelings find themselves in the position of the small boy who had been instructed by his mother not to ask for a second piece of cake. Johnny eyed his empty plate wistfully and then said:

"Mother, you is a fine cake baker. Then, when his mother did not take the hint, he added: 'But you 'clined to cut the pieces too small.'"

NEW HOME OF BUCKEYE STATE
BUILDING AND LOAN COMPANY

From a Modest Beginning It Has Become a Great Financial Institution With Resources of Thirty-One Millions —New Structure Will Occupy Site of Keith Theater on East Gay Street.

On April 1, will begin the demolition of Keith's theater, Columbus, on which site will be erected the new office building of The Buckeye State Building and Loan company.

The edifice will be 11 stories above the main business room 40 feet in height and will occupy the corner, 94 feet on Gay street and 187½ feet on Pearl.

The site of The Buckeye's new building is in the heart of the financial district and practically in the center of Columbus. The location on Gay street is practically the same distance east of Knight, vice president, professor of American history, O. S. U.; Robert Livingston, president Livingston Seed Co.; W. J. Eilber, Lauterbach & Eilber insurance; B. C. Blachley, secretary; Fred C. Rector, general counsel of Wilson & Rector, lawyers; Allen R. Rankin, assistant secretary; Dr. A. O. Ross, dentist; J. Elmer Jones, secretary, H. C. Godman Shoe company; Ben J. Throop, president Throop-Martin Sash & Door Co.; Ollie Gibsen, attorney; Harry H. Price, president Columbus Die Tool and Machine Co.

The object and purpose of the or-

High street as the present premises are west of this main artery.

The Buckeye will use the entire basement, main floor, mezzanine and second story for its use.

Description of building.
The exterior will be of polished granite base, granolithic to top of truss, floor and brick granolithic trim for the 10 story office portion. A fine classic colonnade across the front will be one of the striking architectural features. Each column will be five feet in diameter and 35 feet, eight inches high.

The Buckeye's quarters on the first floor will be very unusual and striking in their layout. The main business room, 75 feet wide and 180 feet deep, has a ceiling height of 40 feet. Above will be a mezzanine behind a fine interior colonnade. The walls will be faced up to a height of 12 feet with marble and Travertine stone. The floor will be large squares of Tennessee marble.

The Buckeye has provided a unique convenience for its tenants—a sub-basement under the entire building for automobile parking space. Entrance will be by a ramp from Lynn street. Each tenant may come into the building in his automobile and proceed directly to the elevator, thence to his office.

History of the Buckeye
The Buckeye was incorporated and began business January 2, 1895, the incorporators being; L. L. Rankin, L. P. McCullough, B. C. Blachely, James H. Burns and Frank Rathmell. All of these men are still active and members of the board of directors, except L. L. Rankin and James H. Burns, who died within recent years.

The Buckeye began business in a room located in the Wesley block, 101 North High street, which adjoined the law offices of L. L. Rankin, its early president.

At the end of the first year's business the company had resources of less than $50,000.00—today, after 31 years, its resources amount to $31,500,000.

The Present Directors.
L. P. McCullough, president; C. C. Guthrie, vice president and cashier; Hon. Frank Rathmell, vice president, ex-common pleas judge; George W.

Knights, vice president, professor of American history, O. S. U.; Robert Livingston, president Livingston Seed Co.; W. J. Eilber, Lauterbach & Eilber insurance; B. C. Blachley, secretary; Fred C. Rector, general counsel of Wilson & Rector, lawyers; Allen R. Rankin, assistant secretary; Dr. A. O. Ross, dentist; J. Elmer Jones, secretary, H. C. Godman Shoe company; Ben J. Throop, president Throop-Martin Sash & Door Co.; Ollie Gibsen, attorney; Harry H. Price, president Columbus Die Tool and Machine Co.

The business grew and it was necessary four years later to remove to larger quarters, known as 22 West Gay street. This was a narrow two story building, the lower floor used as a building and loan office and the second floor by law offices.

The business continued to grow and the then cramped quarters were demolished and the quarters 40x95 feet now occupied were erected and have been occupied since 1912.

Recently these quarters became cramped and the work of the various departments crowded into space all too small. Hence, the call for larger quarters and the movement towards building another absolutely fire proof structure with plenty of space in the upper stories for expansion in future years.

President L. P. McCullough, has had valuable training in The Buckeye's ideal of safety ever since its organization. He has worked his way up thru the organization by faithful service from messenger to the presidency.

Mr. McCullough's wife was a Pickaway county girl, Miss Cora Hancock, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Felix Hancock, of Perry township.

The officers and directors have followed a safe policy for this institution thruout the years and will continue to safeguard the institution for all time.

Porcelain Traffic Lines

A new idea for making permanent white lines for use at street crossings and for the direction of motor traffic is to be tried out soon in London, says Popular Science Monthly. White porcelain studs are inserted in holes drilled in wood paving.

The studs are inserted in a line three abreast, making a strip of white wide enough to be seen easily. The chief advantage of the porcelain is that it is unaffected by weather, oil, or mud, and thus makes a line that cannot be erased by the constant beat of traffic.

"The Student Prince" the most sumptuous operetta ever produced by the Messrs. Shubert and considered the crowning musical achievement of a decade, will begin a week's engagement at the Hartman theater, Columbus, Monday night, March 8, at 8:15.

It will be remembered that when this fascinating musical play was presented here earlier in the season an extra matinee had to be given to accommodate the crowds wishing to witness it.

The company that will present the operetta is the Chicago cast and chorus which has been playing at the Great Northern theater for more than a year and is headed by Dixon Frasier, the well known tenor in the role of the prince, and Eileen Van Biene, popular prima-donna in the role of Kathie. Other well known artists in the cast are Eddie Garvie, Patricia Ann Manners, George Mack Evelyn Darville, Walter McNally, Ann Carey, Otis Sheridan, Charlotte Granville, Walter Tenny, James Phillips, Clyde Moffet, John Goldsworthy, Timothy Daley, James Murray and others of note. The famous male chorus and the charming altos and sopranos all go to make up an organization of more than 125 trained singers.

It will be recalled that the story is about the young Prince Karl Franz, who is sent away to Hendeberg for a year of study, only to be recalled to Karlsburg and the throne upon the untimely death of his aged grandfather, the king. In the meanwhile he has fallen in love with Kathie, a pretty waitress at the Inn of the Three Golden Apples, and altho his troth is plighted to the Princess Margaret Alexis, his cousin, whom he eventually marries, he never forgets Little Kathie, and in one of the sweetest and most touching scenes ever written, he goes back to the Inn looking for the sweetheart of his student days, but finds she is engaged to wed another. The thrilling, soul-stirring musical score by Sigmund Romberg has never been equalled.

Matinees will be given on Wednesday and Saturday afternoon at 2:15. Mail orders now.

Travels of Ducks

Wild ducks do not go helter-skelter north and south when the seasons change, says the Baltimore Sun. They travel by well-defined air lanes, explaining why out of 10,000 lakes in Minnesota, for instance, there are about 9,000 where a wild duck is never seen. These lanes in the air are known as duck "passes" and invariably new flocks find them, and year in and year out travel the same course.

MINE DISASTER

Eccles, W. Va., March 11.—(UP.)—Work of clearing the number 5 shaft of the Crab Orchard Improvement Company of debris caused by the explosion of Monday night, was continued today as rescuers worked frantically to free two men believed still alive.

During the night workers recovered another body, bringing the total number of dead removed to 15.

Two more men are known to be dead and it was expected their bodies would be recovered some time today.

One miner, rescued with 40 others from shaft No. 6, died Monday night.

He Passed

At an examination a boy, asked to state why a tiger is striped, wrote: "It is striped because it makes it better for circus proprietors. If a tiger escapes from a circus it is easier to find him than if he had no stripes. He will not go far without someone noticing that he is not a horse or a dog, on account of his stripes, and calling on and asking the circus people if they have lost a tiger."

Japan Leads Fish Eaters

Japan leads in the consumption of fish per capita per annum. There it is about 200 pounds per person, per year, while in England, also a big fish-eating country, it is 45 to 50 pounds per person a year. In Canada, where fishing is a big industry, the consumption is about 25 pounds per person a year.

Sweet Clover Is Leading Legumes

Crop Is Entitled to Position in Front Rank as Soil Improver.

Chemical investigations which are being made on different legume plants by the college of agriculture, University of Illinois, indicate that common biennial sweet clover is entitled to the position which it has held among the front rank legumes for soil improvement, according to E. E. DeTurk, chief of soil technology.

Alfalfa is a crop of great promise as a combination feed and soil improvement crop, but it is not so well adapted to direct use for green manure as is sweet clover. Red clover, which has enjoyed more than a half-century of recognition as an old standby, is gradually giving way to alfalfa and sweet clover, in part, at least, because of the uncertainty of securing satisfactory stands. Dalea, a comparatively new crop, offers but little promise, while Korean lespedeza, which is just making its debut, bids fair to be a satisfactory acid land crop in the south half of the state, where liming is either pending or in localities where liming is impracticable.

Soil Improving Crops.

While certain nonlegume plants have value as soil improvers, through the addition of organic matter and the conversion of insoluble mineral elements into more readily available forms, the most important soil improving crops will always be restricted to the legume family, because of the added advantage of these plants in fixation of atmospheric nitrogen.

Growing crops and bacteria, like human beings, are prone to save energy. Energy is required in the fixation of atmospheric nitrogen. Consequently both legume crops, even though well inoculated, and their nodule bacteria as well, will absorb and utilize nitrate nitrogen from the soil when it is present, in preference to working harder for the air supply. Thus soils that are already well supplied with available nitrogen do not benefit as much from the growing of legumes as do poorer soils which are more greatly in need of building up.

Most Desirable Legumes.

The most desirable soil-building legumes are all acid-sensitive crops, so that on acid land their use is conditioned upon the use of limestone. Some areas of acid land in Illinois are so inaccessible to liming facilities as to make the problem of soil improvement by means of limestone and legumes a serious one. It is probable that acid land so situated could be managed to the best advantage by either devoting it to forestry or other special uses or else building it up by the use of limestone and the proper use of legumes. It is questionable whether such land can ever be maintained permanently profitable under general farming in which the cropping system is restricted to acid land crops. There is not enough evidence upon which one can make dogmatic statements in this regard. However, it is unquestionable that the production which can be maintained permanently under such conditions is at a markedly lower level than where the acid condition of the soil is corrected.

How to Fail in Dairying Told by Iowa Specialist

A sure way to avoid having a lot of milking to do is to follow the suggestions offered below, according to Burt Okerkirk, dairy production extension specialist, Iowa State college.

Keep the milking cows in the cornstalks to dry them up before winter—it is difficult to milk by lantern light. Feed timothy hay, straw or cornstalks because these are low in protein, a muscle builder—the cows can be handled easier.

Don't use balanced rations. Don't use a silo—silage stimulates production.

Have a pitchfork ready at all times to teach cows their places. Always pet them with a milk stool.

Keep 30 cows that produce 150 pounds of fat each rather than 15 that average 300 pounds of fat.

Keep a scrub bull or cow freshener.

FARM FACTS

Have the weed trees all been taken from your woodlot?

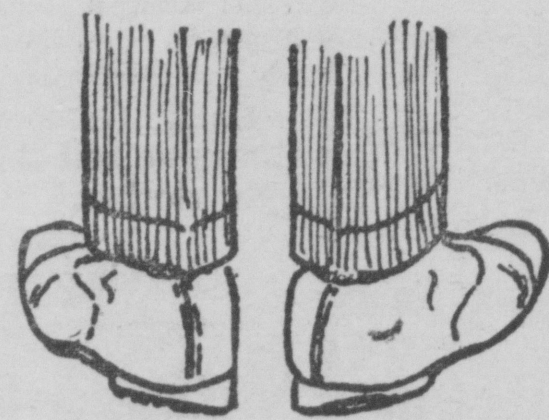

Jabbing the reins or continued tapping with the whip soon will teach the young colt to be an old loafer.

Keep calves and young stock growing in a thrifty condition. Their future usefulness depends largely upon present care.

If properly planned a crop rotation will add materially in distributing the farm labor and will greatly reduce the amount of outside help required for the efficient operation of the farm.

The more pigs saved per litter the more profit there is in hog production so give the brood sow plenty of exercise, enough, but not an overabundance of food, and see that her pen is clean and dry.

While trees and shrubs are dormant caterpillar nests and egg masses of various insects may be seen readily. Burn the nests with a torch of kerosene soaked rags, and paint the egg masses with a solution of creosote.

What a world of meaning in that phrase! It means a crop failure, or a lost job, or a siege of sickness— but above all it means nothing in the bank to stave off hard times. We have yet to know a case where a regular depositor in the First National Bank was called "down at the heel!"

RICH MAN'S SON SENTENCED FOR LIFE
Mason, Mich., March 11.—(UP.)—Sentenced to life imprisonment, Arthur Rich, of Battle Creek, was to leave here today for Jackson State prison branch to pay the penalty demanded by the state of Michigan for criminally assaulting Louise King, a Battle Creek college girl. The son of a wealthy steel products manufacturer, was found guilty by a circuit court jury after 25 minutes deliberation late yesterday, following a bitterly contested 20-day re-trial.
Denying a stay of sentence, Judge Chas. B. Collingwood briefly conferred with Rich in his private chambers, returned to the court and immediately imposed the maximum penalty possible under the laws of the state.
Rich was held to have brutally beaten the 20-year-old girl with his fists, fracturing her jaw in five places and then criminally assaulting her during a stroll on a Battle Creek golf course last May.

Sheep Carried All Summer on Pasture
Use of Forage Crops Is Practical Feed Plan.
(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)
Use of forage crops for pasturing sheep in summer is a practical means of feeding them, according to the results of experiments conducted by the United States Department of Agriculture on its experiment farm at Beltsville, Md. Observations were made not only of the gains in weight but also of the general condition of the animals, including resistance to disease and parasites.
The crops used in this system of pastures in the order of use were as follows: Fall-sown rye, wheat, winter barley, oats, and Canada field peas, soy beans, corn and velvet beans, fall-sown winter barley, and winter wheat.
It was shown that sheep can be raised successfully by using such crops as cowpeas, soy beans, and like plants to provide the entire summer pasturage. The method was beneficial also in the control of stomach worms and other internal parasites. By the method lambs can be grown to market weights without being visibly affected by parasite infestation. A frequent rotation of pasture made possible by this system is beneficial, but not entirely adequate, in controlling parasites of sheep carried on the farm throughout the year.

Maximum Production of the Average Dairy Cow
The average dairy cow reaches her maximum production at the age of five years. The amount of milk produced at the fourth lactation period, or when the cow is five years old, is about one and one-half times more than that produced during the first lactation period as a two-year-old. Milk flow will not diminish until the cow has reached old age, which is usually considered ten years. However, one should consider a cow eight years old or over as aged. A seven-year-old cow is not considered old, and providing she is a profitable producer she should not be butchered.
The average cow will probably start to lose her teeth at the age of eight years; however, again this is a consideration that cannot be given a definite answer owing to the fact that the individuality of each animal must enter into the consideration.
In determining whether a cow is a good milk animal or not one should not base their conclusion entirely upon the amount of milk produced when the animal first freshens. The profitable cow is the long-time producer.
A cow to be a "good" producer in your section of the country should give at least 200 pounds of butterfat. Cows that give 300 pounds of butterfat or more per year are not at all uncommon.

Son of Proven Sire Is Fit to Head Dairy Herd
Very painstaking investigations at the Missouri experiment station demonstrate the importance of selecting bulls from sires having high-producing daughters. The conclusion is reached that a son of a proven sire and out of a large record dam is the best sire if you cannot obtain a proven sire.
Many breeders at the present time are placing considerable emphasis on the production of the dam in selecting young bulls. The Missouri investigation demonstrated that the dam's record is on the average a poor guide as to her ability to produce high-producing sons. The investigation was under the direction of A. C. Ragsdale, head of the department of dairy husbandry. Details are found in research bulletin No. 79 of the Missouri experiment station, Columbia.
Save Chicken Manure
Chicken manure is one of the most valuable fertilizers produced on the farm. It is especially rich in nitrogen, and since this is one of the essential elements that plants must have for growth, it should be saved.
The practice of most farmers to have no dropping boards under the roosts is wasteful. With a properly constructed dropping board one may scrape or rake off the manure into an old tub or bucket, and load it onto the wagon in a few minutes.
Curry Comb and Brush
The thorough, yet gentle use of curry comb and brush does for an animal what a bath and clean shirt do for man. It gives the skin a better chance to perform its important functions; it makes the hair coat more adequate as a protection against inclement weather; it is an excellent preventive for certain external parasites; it makes for good health as well as good looks. At no time is it more essential to animal well-being than during winter.
Spread Manure Green
Manures can be spread so much more lightly when green, whether by hand or the spreader, that there is a great saving of material. The idea that land needs a heavy coat of manure is erroneous; most lands giving far better results with two light coverings than one heavy covering in a given number of years. As the course of nearly all decaying matter is downward, the longer it remains on or near the surface, the better results you will get.

CABLE REPAIR AT SEA IS THRILLING

Broken Strand Calls Out Ship in All Weather.

New York.—Stretching out and away, like a tiny thread of life itself, the transatlantic cable from Cape Cod to Brest usually connects the Old world with the New.

But sometimes it breaks! When this happens there is much concern in the offices of the French Cable company—a breathless suspense, while delicate instruments are locating the break. Often it is near the middle of the ocean, and when the break is located the cable repair ship Edouard Jeramec is dispatched to the scene.

A marine oddity, the Jeramec is one of the finest cable ships afloat. Huge tanks below decks house 250 miles of deep-sea cables. Grappling hooks of all descriptions, weighted to sink them three miles below the surface, are stowed properly away. Buoys to mark the ends of cable when located, are lashed on deck. Powerful winches, fore and aft, are ready to roll in or out the heavy strands.

It is heart-breaking work, this locating the broken ends of a deep-sea cable. Capt. Julien Le Martelu and his crew will assure anyone. In Europe and America, cable transmission is hindered while the Jeramec steams slowly back and forth, groping about the ocean floor. Howling winds and lashing seas must be disregarded. Huge lights transform night into day, and the work continues.

Often the cable is located and the business of bringing it to the surface, a matter of eight hours' work, is begun. And after it almost reaches the deck of the ship, only to break again and slide mockingly back to its resting place in the mud and silt of the bottom.

TAPS SOUNDED FOR VETERAN OF CIVIL WAR

Christopher Rebstock Died at Home in Clarksburg in His 93rd Year.

An aged, respected and sterling citizen of Clarksburg, one of the last of the thinning ranks of veterans of the Civil war, answered the final summons at 10 o'clock Wednesday evening, March 10, in the death of Christopher Rebstock.

Mr. Rebstock was born in Baden, Germany on March 30, 1833, and was in his 93d year at the time of his death. Except for time served in the Army of the Republic, he had lived continuously in Clarksburg since 1858.

Christopher Rebstock was married in 1858 to Sarah Woolsey of Circleville and immediately the couple took up residence at Clarksburg. To the union eleven children were born, four of whom, Mrs. Frank Ater, Mrs. Thomas Ater, Charles Rebstock and Mrs. Jerome Kemmey preceded him to the grave.

Seven children survive: Frank, William, Carey, James, Ernest, Della and Fanny. The deceased had made his home with James and Ernest since the death of the wife July 30, 1924. Twenty-one grandchildren and 46 great-grandchildren survive.

Christopher Rebstock enlisted in Co., A, of the 155th regiment of Ohio Volunteer Infantry, May 2, 1864, at Camp Dennison. On May 8, he was mustered into the United States service by Captain R. L. Smith. Along with other members of the company Mr. Rebstock was relieved from service at Camp Dennison, August 27, 1864.

Funeral services will be held from the Clarksburg M. E. church Saturday at 2 o'clock with Rev. Stevenson in charge. Interment at Brown's chapel.—News-Advertiser.

Use Bamboo in India to Make Paper Pulp

Philadelphia.—The successful issue of the experiments carried out for some years in India by William Raitt is now reported, says the Edinburgh Scotsman. The Indian forest records contain a summary of the investigations on bamboo and grasses for the paper pulp by Mr. Raitt, who is officer in charge of the paper pulp section of the Forest Research Institute and college at Dehra Dun.

There were many difficulties to be overcome: (1) A method to be evolved of pulping bamboo so that the percentage of bleach required was reduced within economic limits; (2) a reduction in quantity of caustic soda required to reduce the raw material to pulp, and (3) the preparation of the raw material to a fit state for digestion.

It is stated that the economy in the case of bamboo amounts to 15 per cent, on present manufacturing charges for materials and chemicals only. Mr. Raitt, however, says that if the saving in recovery, coal, labor and fixed charges up to the bleached pulp stage are taken into account, the total reduction in cost will be well over 20 per cent.

No Credit Coming to Him

A Portland (Maine) window dresser unconsciously earned a tribute for self-restraint, because, though receiving a painful injury while tacking a sheet in a window, he retired quietly and without a murmur. A friend expressed his surprise at the stoicism of the window dresser. The latter retorted: "How in the blankety-blank could I swear with my mouth full of tacks?"

Home, sweet home (eight o'clock in the evening)—The baby's cryin' for a drink of water. Dad's yellin' for his slippers. The two boys can't find their pajamas. The dishes are waitin' in the sink. Somebody's ringing the front doorbell. And mom has but two hands.
